

WHAT'S STOPPING BLACK YOUTH FROM GETTING HELP?

BARRIERS BEYOND THE CLINIC

Source: Children and Youth Services Review

Three walls block the way: stigma, no trust, and no way to get there. Even if help exists, it's not always made for us. And young people know it.

Takeaway

To reach Black youth, we need to meet them where they are—with care that's real, not just clinical. That means showing up in schools, homes, and community spaces that feel safe, relatable, and rooted.

Food For Thought

If the system's not working, how do we build one that does?

If you could redesign mental health support in your neighborhood, what would it look like?

What would it feel and sound like?

Act On It

Are you a caregiver—or know a youth facing tough challenges?
